Compared to other competitors, the app is a little costly, but it will suit different kinds of users. If you are an avid photographer, photographer or graphic designer, or just like memes, then Photoshop Elements is for you. In this post, I will share a number of ways to use Photoshop Elements to improve your work, as well as use it for a few projects. Some of the techniques have been shared in numerous blog posts. I won't cover them all. In this article, I will take a closer look at: How to use Photoshop Elements to create a vector graphic. 5 places you should save your Photoshop Elements work. How to use image editing features in Photoshop Elements. How to quickly crop, scale, resize and retouch images in Photoshop Elements. How to work faster, optimize your workflow and make use of the editing tools in Photoshop Elements. 2 Photoshop Elements features you can't live without. Use Vector Graphics in Photoshop Elements In this post, you will be learning the basics of using the vector graphics toolbox in Photoshop Elements. Vector graphics are images that contain lines, curves and shapes. People can view and edit vector graphics with any graphics editor. The vectors are bitmap images — they can be scaled infinitely without losing quality. The edges and details are preserved. The lines and curves of the vector graphics are converted to pixels (or pixels of a fixed size, in cases of gradients), which allows the shapes to be scaled in any size without losing quality. Therefore, vector graphics support the creation of large and small sizes and can display on devices of all sizes. Best of all, since they have been converted to pixels, they can be easily edited in any graphics editor (if you want them to be!). The main advantage is that they can be scaled with no loss of quality and keeping the sharp edges. You can edit images and create amazing graphics as you please. There are numerous examples of the use of vector graphics in Photoshop Elements. Here are some of them: We will use Photoshop Elements to create an image with vector graphics. First,

YouTube drama-comedian Matt Farah is pulling a late-night comic prank on Donald Trump, telling the president that he is "no more fun than a Mexican." Footage of Farah's conversation with the real-life president appeared on the former Daily Show writer's Instagram page. Mr Trump appears to suggest to the actor that he could have a presidential pardon if he writes a comedy show about him. "I'd be willing to do it," said Mr

Trump. "You'd do a good job. I mean, you'd be so good. "But you'd be a little fun too. 'No more fun than a Mexican' - that's how I would say." The two then launch into an impromptu rendition of the Mr Trump impersonation from the sketch comedy show Saturday Night Live. Farah (Real Matt Farah) with Donald Trump Farah ended his performance with a promise to the American leader: "Matt Farah will be your friend." A portion of the original conversation is available to watch on Farah's Instagram page. A representative for the actor and comedian told CNN on Monday: "The video is absurd, and was meant to be. "It isn't a serious conversation and is clearly meant to be satirical, and in no way an endorsement of our current president, only a parody." Farah, who hosts the weekly "Matt and Sid" podcast, has been vocal in his support for Hillary Clinton's failed presidential campaign. He has also defended members of the UK's student Unite Against Fascism and blamed Mr Trump's victory on "a politically liberal but otherwise neutral London nightclub audience". On Sunday, in the US, Farah described the country's election result as "very sad" and "bizarre". "Very sad what's happened to America. It seems to be an election of friends, not policy," Farah said in a post on Instagram. "Pretty bizarre," he added, before urging his followers to "stay strong" and "stay progressive". Farah told fans that he plans to move to New York "because of the weather". "It's not a political thing," he said, adding that he
